Sports and religion have an interesting relationship in America.

For some, sports are a religion, for others sports are a platform for their religion, and still for others sports are a curious obsession in a world with so much need. John and Marcia Mount Shoop live in all the connections and tensions between these two institutions of American culture everyday in their household. He is a football coach and she is an ordained minister and theologian.

Join us for an evening of personal and theological reflection.
